FINE DAY FOR THE GALLERY THE ANKLE DEEP SECOND

While Kirkby Loses Match Through the Vagaries of a Lost Ball.

Southampton, Long Island, Sept. 12.-with the elimination of Oswald Kirkby, of Englewood, at the hands of Lee W. Maxwell, of Scarsdale, and the subsequent retirement of the latter through the agency of Henry J. Topping, of Greenwich, a new factor came forward in the course of the first and second match play rounds of the tournament over the national golf links of America here today. Moreover, Bernard Darwin, the English golf critic, in disposing of George H. Barnes, of Apawamis, and R. M. Lewis, the Flushing youth, came through to the semi-final round and will clash with Topping to-morrow. Darwin plays a good game and acts as if he would rather be at it than eat. His iron shots are particularly pleasing.

On the other side of the draw McKim Holling of Westbrook, a brother of Miss Marion Hollins, the women's metropolitan champion, is confronted with W. Hoffman, of the home club. Hollins first retired Archie McIlwaine, 2d, whose golf this season has been on the sensational order, then put out E. Mortimer Barnes, of Englewood, the man who blasted the last hopes of Harold Hilton here a year age. Hoffman came through at the expense of James A. Stillman, of Sleepy Hollow, and Charles B. MacDonald, of the National Links.

The match which created the most talk was that which involved Kirkby and Maxwell for the unusual incidents it developed. Kirkby was not the old Kirkby. with smashing drives and deadly approaches, and at the end of the fourteenth the contest was on even terms Maxwell sliced his drive to some thick

Darwin attracted considerable attention for some of his recoveries were excellent, notably at the cape hole, the fourteenth. His drive was in the sand on the shore far off the fairway. Taking a chance of going into the bay, he laid his second on the green from fully 150 yards dead on the fag. He won the hole in 4 to 5. This the flag. He won the hole in 4 to 5. The Gangster and His Girl

This story, written by a settlement worker, is frankly honest in its portrayal of illicit romance. The reader realizes that sentiment itself is stained with the underworld filth. And better so perhaps—for no great evil is ever exterminated unless there is first knowledge of it, and then flaming revolt
